HEARST DODGED BEHIND MILK WAGON TO EVADE SERVICE

When Discovered by Process Server He Ran Through Street to His Home and Slammed Door in Man's Face.

William R. Hearst would seem to take rank with John D. Rockefeller and other Standard Oil magnates as a process-dodger, according to the circumstantial story told by M. F. Palmedo, the young man who, after weeks of manoeuvring, finally served all but John D. of the heads of

"When the papers were turned over to me I was told that it was useless to try to serve Hearst at his office on Park Row. Several men had been trying vainly for weeks to reach him there. Nevertheless I made several attempts. That was in January of 1905. I went repeatedly to the Park Row building, but I never got past the down building, but I never got past the down building. But I never got past the down building. This automobile used to stand in front of the building, and once I watched it all night, but he never came near it. I suppose he had some prayate means of getting in and out.

A Truthful Man,
